Are you using Granny's china, minus a few pieces? Anatoly and Rena Krishtul recently made two Meissen pieces to match an extremely discontinued nineteenth-century service ($10,000 for the pair). They'll just as expertly custom-make a single teacup (about $300), or a platter (a small one without too much ornamentation will run about $800) by finding a matching blank and painting in the design by hand, then firing it on the premises.
